FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

HES, Inc. Introduces a Genuine Breakthrough In Electric Strikes with the 5900 Series

PHOENIX, AZ (September 24, 2007) - HES, Inc., an ASSA ABLOY Group company, announces the release of the 5900 Series, a revolutionary, concealed electric strike that requires no cutting on the frame. Best of all, this new solution includes patented vertical adjustability to overcome misalignment, door sag and other 'real world' conditions.

Based on the popular 5000 Series, the 5900 delivers Grade 1 strength in a compact design that sits completely hidden within the door frame, for clean installation and superior aesthetics. In fact, the electric strike is shallow enough to fit right into a standard ANSI/BHMA A115.2 dustbox like the Curries® E-I frame preparation. Engineered to work with all major cylindrical locks, the 5900 series electric strike is also field selectable 12/24 VDC/VAC and fail safe/fail secure.

While a concealed electric strike is by no means new for HES, the 5900 represents a quantum leap forward, delivering true performance with a critical new feature: vertical adjustability. As Michael Webb, President and CEO of HES Inc., notes, "HES originally pioneered this innovative internal ramp, concealed electric strike design in 1986 with the introduction of our 9000 series. Unfortunately, because doors and frames are commonly out of vertical alignment, we experienced a 40% failure rate with the products during installation, which led to our discontinuing it in 1990. Now with our new patented design, installers can achieve perfect alignment in this imperfect world." With vertical adjustability, the 5900 series delivers true convenience, aesthetics and performance, with an installation time of only a few minutes. With ground-breaking engineering and unique product features, HES is once again raising the standards for electric strikes.
